Macro data in the US is giving mixed signals, pointing out that the economy may not be slowing as much as anticipated. While retail sales fell (-1% MoM) more than expected (-0.5%) in Mar'23 versus Feb'23 (-0.2%), on the other hand, industrial production (0.4% in Mar'23 versus est.: 0.2%) and consumer sentiment index (63.5 in Apr'23 versus est.: 62.1) improved. In addition, a member of Fed Reserve Board, Christopher Waller, suggested that Fed tightening should continue as inflation still remains at elevated. This pushed yields and DXY up. In Singapore, MAS left its monetary policy unchanged (after 5 successive tightening moves earlier), despite elevated core inflation (5.5% in Jan-Feb'23 versus 5.1% in Q4). It also warned of a steeper than anticipated decline in economic in CY23 owing to global factors.

- Barring US, other global indices ended higher. Recent macro data of US, indicates that Fed may possibly continue with the rate hikes in May (82% chance) and June. European indices ended higher led by a rally in banking stocks, with a news of a takeover deal. Sensex rose with strong gains reported by banking and real estate stocks. However, it is trading lower today, while other Asian stocks are trading mixed.

- Except Japan and China (flat), other global yields closed higher. In the US, industrial production and consumer sentiment index, both increased beyond market expectations. In addition, a key Fed official also indicated that Fed rates will have to go up further to tame inflation. As a results, 10Y yields in US jumped by 7bps. India's 10Y yield rose by 3bps (7.22%). It is trading broadly steady at 7.23% today.
